

The Department of Regulatory Agencies (DORA) is currently recruiting for a dynamic, executive level leader, to serve as the Commissioner for the Colorado Division of Banking. The ideal candidate for the position is a proven and progressive thought leader, with a constant eye on customer service and continuous improvement; and a solid understanding of the role regulation plays in the Colorado economy and marketplace.

About the Division: The Division of Banking regulates and supervises state chartered banks and other licensed financial institutions under its jurisdiction. The Division embraces the Department's mission of consumer protection by preserving the public trust, and assuring the integrity and financial soundness of Colorado's banking industry.

About the Commissioner: The State Bank Commissioner plays a pivotal role in Colorado's Banking industry. The Commissioner is the administrative head of the Division and is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the Division and all examinations and enforcement functions, subject to the policymaking and rulemaking authority of the Banking Board.

In providing leadership to the division, and in the Department and industry, the Commissioner is responsible for strategic and performance planning, including developing the direction, goals, objectives and outcomes for the Banking Division. The Commissioner informs federal counterparts, legislators, stakeholders, employees and interested parties through public speaking engagements, media releases, outreach efforts, testimony, and is seen as the "face" of the Banking division in protecting consumers, and building trust and confidence in the banking industry.

The Commissioner plays a key leadership role on the Executive Staff of DORA, in support of the administration, and actively participates in efforts to identify and create opportunities for efficiencies (via Lean) and to reduce regulatory burdens on Colorado consumers and businesses.
